

Letter from Gardiner Greene Hubbard to Alexander Graham Bell, July 2, 1874, with transcript

The message in type as M. M. Bonelli will not answer for us.— Some letter may have that must be divided.

I Shall hope to see you tomorrow or Sunday

I am yours truly Gardiner G. Hubbard

Letter from Gardiner Greene Hubbard to Alexander Graham Bell. Cambridge, Massachusetts. July 2, 1875 or 74. Dear Mr. Bell:

I was very sorry not to see you this morning but did not suppose you would call until this afternoon. I am very much afraid that Mr. Gray has anticipated you in your membrane attachment you know that is about all we have heard from him. If you have no objections I will see Mr. Hayes and ask him about it. A few words from him may save us much time and expense.

The setting up the message in type as per M. Bonetti will not answer for us. Some better way than that must be devised.

I shall hope to see you tomorrow or Sunday. I am, Yours truly, Gardiner G. Hubbard.
